IN THE SPOTLIGHT

On November 16, 2009, Ronnie Wilson with the Department of Planning & Community Development taught erosion and sediment control to three classes of third grade students at Burnt Chimney Elementary. Mr. Wilson used a model called "EnviroScape" provided by the Virginia Department of Conservation & Recreation. This model allowed the children a hands-on approach to understanding the consequences of erosion and sedimentation. The students were excited, attentive, and very well behaved. These students are currently studying erosion in their science class, so this exercise not only benefited the students, but the teachers as well.
